This seventh volume in the series Medicinal and Aromatic Plants - Industrial Profiles collates all of the existing information on the biology, chemistry, agrotechnology, and utilization of the plant genus Carum. Following an overview on all Carum species, it deals mainly with the most important species Carum carvi L. The scientific and economical significance of the genus as well as forthcoming results and future perspectives are discussed.

International authors contribute information on valuable traditions as well as the most up-to-date research results. Physiological, genetical, and agrotechnological specialities of annual and biennial types of caraway are discussed separately. The book provides an overview of the anatomical structure of the most important organs of the plant, and its chemical constituents. It also discusses production practices, including post-harvest techniques, quality requirements, and utilization of the plant's products in pharmacology, and the
